The Extreme Southeastern Point of South Carolina-The Tragedy of Bloody Point, That Wiped Out a Whole Tribe of In-though previous to the Revolutionary war, is still interesting as relating to the ancient history of St. Luke. The islands of Port Royal and St. Helena were pretty thickly settled with white population when Hilton Head, Dow Dusky, Pinckney and the other neighboring islands were held in possession by a few isolated Indians or were altogether uninhabited. They formed a kind of neutral ground between the white and red men. The Indians from Georgia were in the habit of making frequent inroads upon the white settlements, killing the inhabitants and carrying off whatever plunder they could gather, to their remoter homes in the faither south. They formed large war parties and would proceed as fer north as Hilton Head. Here they would skulk about till a fair chance offered, when they would cross Broad river and lavage the neighborng settlements; hence the name of "The Indians were in the habit of returning to Skulk creek after these invasions and would clude pursuit among its numerous nocks and windings. Upon one of these occasions, after having committed a number of murders and having loaded their canoes with whatever plunder they were able to collect, having secured a quantity of "fine water," it is presumed, from the sequel, they passed through Skulk creek on their retuin south without stopping ir their old haunts and never helted until they reached Dow Dusky, where they thought they would be beyond the reach of the whites. "A very strong and determined party of whites went in pursuit of them. On reaching Hilton Head they learned from a few Indians of a friendly tribe that their enemies had not halted, but had proceeded on south. Having induced these friendly Indians to join them as guides, they continued their persuit farther south. When they had gene on as far as Dev. Decky, they discovered Works, and also trees, plants and shrubs by from the smake of their camp that the Indians had haried at the southeast point of the isla: I. The whites landed on the neithy est pertien and marched toward their enemies. The Indians had put all their boats a short distance up what is now known as New river, to avoid the surf which breaks upon the point. The Indians were at the extrome point, enjoying themselves in an unwonted round of convivuality and feasting. The whites approached caustealthily, and, having got between the Indians and their boats, effectually cut off their retreat. A shower of bullets was the first intimation they had of the presence of an enemy. They were shot down, bayoneted, sabered and were flually driven into the

"The surprise was complete; the massacre was dreadful; the white sands were crimsoned with blood, and the earth was strewn with wounded, dying and dead. A few, very few, escaped by swimming, some to the opposite marsh, and one swam entirely over to Tybee, distance of three miles. From the dreadful carnage at this spot it received the name of Bloody Point, which it retains to this time, it being the extreme southoastern point of South Carolina. After this decisive victory the settlements to the north of Broad river received no further molestation from the southern Indians, and soon after Hilton Head itself began to be settled by the whites. The Indians who escaped, having collected after a lapse of some time, re-turned to Hilton Head, and, finding only two of the tribe who had guided the whites in their pursuit, avenged tha downfall of their own tribe by destroy ing both of them. They then returned south and were lost sight of ever after.

A new candidate for public favor is Dawfuskie island, one of the islands not far distant from Savannah and one of the most interesting historically. Dawfuskie is the Indian name of the island. It is some six miles in length and four miles in width, noted for its fish, oystors and crabs and famous of late years for its deer hunting. The Indians were very partial to it—that is, judging from the mounds, tomahawks, arrowheads and other relies of that race which are still to be found on the island. It is the southeastornmost point of South Carolina, and directly opposite Tybee Island, and in what was formerly known as St. Luke's parish, Deaufort district, but now legally designated as Yemassee township, Beaufort county.

The island was at one time the property of the Mongin family, who settled it about 1750, and up to the beginning of the late war it was divided into several plantations and had a population, in addition to the planters' families, of about 1,500 slaves. Several places on the island are still owned by the descendants of the Mongins, Bloody Point by Mr. Mongin Stoddard and Melrose by Mr. Mongin Stoddard and Melrose by Mr. Mongin Stoddard and Melrose by Mr. Alfred H. Stoddard.

The following story of Dawfuskie island appeared in The Morning News of June 24, 1878, and is all of its early history that can be found:

UNION OF THE FREE COINAGE

At the general election in 1894 there were four State tickets in the field in the Republican, the People's party and the Democratic. The Silver party elected every candidate, Newlands receiving a plurality of 1,817 for Congress and Jones a plurality of 1,362 for Governor. For Justice of the Supreme Court and Lieutenant Governor, Bon-Justice, and Sadler a majority of 1,879 the silver men had a majority over all the other parties in the State. The Populists claimed to be as loyal to silver as the Silver party, as did also many of the Democrats, though the platform of the latter indorsed Cleveland's administration. Now the Silver Five Companies of Militia at the Brown men, the Populists and the Democrats have nominated W. J. Bryan for President on an unequivocal free coinage platform and one which also declares against the railroad funding bill. The Democratic and National Silver party financial dependency of the gold gam-

silver Republicans on an equitable basis? Let the Silver party have a Presidential Elector, the Populists one, Police Abbott ordered another comand the Democrats one, all of whom would vote for Bryan, two for Sewall and one for Watson. The State offices could also be apportioned between the three parties and in this way complete fusion could be effected as all three of the parties could nominate the same ticket and if so desired mantain separate party organizations. Prominent Populists, Silver men and Democrats say they would be satisfied with such an arrangement, though there may be others who would not.

Of course the gold men will do all in their power to prevent fusion of the silver forces. They are now making overtures to the Populists and Democrats, but without success. It this arrangement cannot be accomplished then let the silver men and Democrats unite and it is morally certain that a large number of the Populists will join them. This is no time for hair-splitting or airing personal grievances. Great interests ity of the people are for Alabama, the Democrats by 50,000 and Bryan for President and will the Populists by 20,000. AGAINST COUNTY CONVENTIONS.

The people in the eastern part of Nevada, according to the Eureka Sentinel, Pioche Record and other papers, are opposed to county conventions for the farmers threatening to call in all its nomination of local officers. Gladness Comes With a better understanding of the With a better understanding of the With a heart parties of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the

Besides, owing to the encouagement given by the state to such institutions as the Societes de Tir, nearly every man in the country knows how to handle a rifle and is more or less of a soldier. Switzerland could at the shortest notice put into the field and maintain an army of 150,000 men at least properly found and equipped. When the Swiss soldier crosses the threshold of his house, he may be said to be in full marching order, for he keeps his entire home, and every man takes an honest pride in having each article in good condition.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Big Prices Paid by Magazines.

Fabulous prices are sometimes paid for the sensational features in the magazines. A writer who claims to speak with full knowledge of the facts claims the Century company paid $50,000 for its "Lafe of Lincoln," $18,000 for the serial rights to Mrs. Humphry Ward's novel, "Sir George Tressaday," from $250 on up to $750 for Kipling's verses, according to size Charles Sembner's Sons paid J. M. Barne $25,000 for the serial rights to "Sentimental Tommie;" Robert Louis Stevenson received $7,000 for one of the serials he sold to the Mc-Clure syndicate. Other and equally remarkable prices are not lacking Success in literature nowadays means money just as certainly as does success in other pursuits. It's all in the name and the fame.—Family Call.

ON THE BRIDGE

Perfection her In sweetheart's oyes; r cheeks would shame a rose But I can't bear The bridge on sweetheart's nose

It indicates Her noble traits, Her noble traits,
And strongth of purpose shows.
But rivels scorn
And others mourn
The bridge on sweethears - noss

If I should feign If I should reign
A deep dischin
For her, do you suppose
That tears of hate
Would devastato
The bridge on sweetheart's nose?

I think instead
(You see I dread in To add to sweetheart's woes) [7] venture this:

I'll fondly kiss The bridge on sweethourt's nose And warmly praise

And warmly praise
Her gracious ways
And beast my scorn for these
Who worship not
That beauty spot—
The bridge on sweetheart's nose.

THE LOST WAS FOUND.

The House Number Looked Strange Be cause the Transom Was Tipped. If any one had told him he was drunk, he would not have resented it, but would have made an effort to maintain his equilibrium and dignity long enough to explain that he was only a little cozy woozy. He realized that he lived at 206 Irvington street, and that his residence was on the right hand side as he wabbled along homeward. The un-certain light of early dawn, combined with the blear in his eyes, rendered it necessary for him to stop in front of every house and gravely brace himself against the railings until he coald fecus his eyesight on the number.

Finally he identified his house, but after arguing with himself for a couple of minutes he came to the conclusion that he was just woozy enough to make mistakes possible, so to be absolutely certain he balanced himself against the front fence and studied the number on the transom. Instead of 206 he saw 509. He rubbed his eyes and looked again, but the number had not changed. It was still 509. Then he wondered how it happened that he had got on the wrong side of the street and three blocks too far out, made a zigzag across the street and started back, but before he had walked three blocks he came to the end of the street.

The weary pilgrim was bewildered. He couldn't understand it, but getting his directions shaped his course up the street on the right side and kept on until he came to 509 again. He studied it from every possible point of view, even trying to stand on his head to read it; but it perversely romained 509. Uttorly bowildered, he sat down on the steps and waited till a policeman come along. "I'm losht," he explained. "I want er go ter 206 Irvington street." "This is the place, right here," de clared the officer. "Can't be. Thish is 509."

"Ne, it ain't. It's 306, but the tranom is turned over. The lost was found.—San Francisco Ben Wade on Davis. When Ben Wade of Ohio was the presiding officer of the senate, he used occasionally to call some senator to take the chair and relieve himself by walking up and down in the lobby which runs back of the senate chamber. Once while thus walking he was overtaken by a certain carpetbag senator from one of the southern states, who occupied the identical chair that Jefferson Davis had used while a member of the senate. Walking along by the side of Wade, he rubbed his back wearily and said: Wade, these senate chairs are the most uncomfortable things I ever saw. My back is positively blistered from sittle in mine." Wade looked at him for a moment, and, as he turned away, muttered, "Davis left enough brains in the seat of that chair to blister the backs of two or three such men as you are."-San Francisco Argonaut.

When They Began to Write. It is astonishing the number of suc-cessful writers who were well on in years before they even thought of adopting literature as a profession. Thomas Hardy was 31 before he began to turn his attention to story telling. George Eliot was 40 before she wrote a line of fiction, having no faith in her powers as a story teller. Barry Cornwall was 35 before he thought of writing verse. Jules Verne was 35 before he wrote his first story. Rider Haggard started at 26: Mr. Barrie and Conan Doyle at 27; Grant Allen at 29, and Sir Walter Besant and Mr. G. Manville Fenn at 30. George Meredith was nearly 33 when he began to write stories in his own peculiar style. - New York World.

BABY INCUBATORS.

PHYSICIAN TELLS OF THE CON-STRUCTION AND OPERATION.

The Apparatus Is Very Simple and Inexpensive, but Attendance Is Costly-In Addition to Saving a Life, Each Incubation Contributes Useful Knowledge.

In sharp contrast to the lavish reck lessness with which noble, splendid lives are often sacrificed to some futile, ignoble cause, is the infinite vigilance and care, the ingenuity and skill that are sometimes expended upon preserving and fanning into flame a little spark that has hardly attained the dignity of being called a life.

Doubtless most are familiar with the metal receptacle 4 by 2, standing on four legs about waist high, with a small water pipe and heating apparatus on one side and a cold air pipe and additional apparatus on the other known as the infant incubator. But perhaps few realize the patient skilled watching and the consequent expense necessary to the bringing forward of the little inmate, until it shall be able to take its place in the world as a real "live and kicking"

At the first appearance upon life's stage of this speck of humanity "source half made up," it is swathed in a bundle of absorbent cotton and laid in its little nest, with nothing to distract its attention but a perfectly accurate thermometer, to which it, however, seems wholly indifferent. The glass lid is then almost closed. Experience has taught the physicians that it is better to leave it open a little space. A trained nurse at once takes her place by the side of this unique object and keeps constant guard over temperature, conditions of air, etc. Absolute quiet and a subdued light are among the requirements. The temperature may range from 90 to 98 degrees. In cases of low vitality it is kept at 98, and with the most robust is never allowed to go below 90 degrees. Then every hour the little charge must be fed. This is sometimes accomplished by means of a dropper, but more often a little rubber tube is passed through the mouth and esophagus into the stomach, and into this tube is slowly poured a dram, about a teaspoonful, of prepared food. Thus in the 24 hours about three ounces of food are absorbed. This food is made after a formula arranged by a most expert chemist and changes from day to day according to the development of the baby.

Every 36 hours the little gown of absorbent cotton is exchanged for a perfeetly fresh one of the same material. The food and clothing of this embryo personage are not, therefore, great bills of expense, but its lodgings, its physigian and nurses make up a pretty sum for its indulgent parents.

It will easily be seen that the only equirements for raising a baby in an incubator are a perfectly even, high temperature, pure air and a food the nearest approach possible to its natural food. But simple as this sounds it has taxed every resource of the best engineering and sanitary authorities, the finest bacteriologists and chemists in the country to arrive at the present state of advancement. An incubator as it is now perfected costs about $200. A few firms have them to rent, and as the demand for them is naturally small one may be rented at any time.

Dr. Rotch, who is responsible for many of the recent improvements of the incubator, has been very successful in its use. He insists upon having always two trained nurses, so that no moment may there be the risk of a change in conditions which might turn the scale the wrong way. This of itself means $50 a week, and the time of incubation is usually from two months to ter weeks. But the haby so saved comes in time to be quite the equal of his fellows who followed the good, old fashioned Hospitals cannot boast as great success from their experience with incubarors, although several include one among their appliances. In the first place it is often a case where the tiny Mohammed must go to the mountain, and it is almost impossible to accomplish this without some little expenure. Then in most cases the child has not only premature birth to struggle with, but he west factor of having come from ill conditioned, badly nourished and often intemperate parents. Besides, no nurse in a hospital, no score of nurses, can so arrange that one shall always have an eye on the thermometer; and the 50 or more full blown babies will not upon demand refrain their voices from weeping out of consideration for the sensiiveness of their delicate little comrade. The hospital people are sometimes asked why they make so great an effort to save the lives of these poor little creatures who, at the best, must enter the race of life fearfully handicapped.

Maine to California, from the St. Lawrence to the gulf, are constantly looking to these hospitals for the latest and best results of their researches and experiments, and by studying the treatment and watching the development of cases here, the incubating process included, they may be able to save many a life nearer home. Besides, who can foretell whether the tiny atom may not turn out a Lincoln or a Wagner as well as a commonplace Smith or Jones?-M. D. in Chicago Record.

Has I Evoluted From the Brutal Tell Over a Tortured Enemy?

Just as the hoof of the horse is the remnant of an original five toes, just as the pineal gland in man is now said to be the survival of a prehistoric eye on the top of the head, so, perhaps, this levity in regard to particular ailments (in others) may be the descendant of an aboriginal ferocity in man. It is a well known theory that what we call humor arose from the same source; that the first human laugh that over woke the astonished echoes of gloomy primeval forests was not an expression of mirth, but exultation over the misery of a tortured enemy.

There is to this day something terrible in laughter. The laugh of madness or of cruelty is a sound more awful than that of the bitterest lamentations.

by means of that strange phonograph that we call literature we can listen even now to the laughter of the dead, to the hearty guffaws or cynical titterings of generation after generation of bygone men and women, and if we are bygone men and women, and if we are curious in such matters we can probe into the nature of the changes that have passed over the fashion of men's humer. For it has been said, not without the support of weighty cumulative evidence, that, as we penetrate further into the past, we find the sense of humor depending always more obviously and solely upon the enjoyment of the pain, misfortune, mortification or embarrass ment of others. The sense of superiority was the sense of humor in our ancestors; or, in other words, vanity lay at the root of this, as of most other attributes of our bumptious species! Putting ear to our phonograph, we catch the echoes of a strange and merry tumult; boisterous, cruel, often brutal, yet with here and there a tender cadence from some selitary voice; and presently this lonely note grows stronger and sweeter, as we travel slowly toward our time, until at length, through all the merriment, we can hear the soft undermarmur of pity. Does the picture not seize the imagination—the long laughter of the ages which begins in cruelty and ends in love?-Westminster Review.

Farseeing Scotchwoman

It would probably take many generations of undesired and undesirable adversity to train Americans into the fareeing thriftiness of the Scotch. An illustration of this thrift is contained in the story of a Scotchwoman who had been promised a present of a new bon-net by a lady. Before she made the purchase, the lady called and asked the good woman:

"Would you rather have a felt or a straw bonnet, Mrs. Wilson?" "Weel," said Mrs. Wilson, "I think I'll tak' a strae ane. It'll maybe be a mouthfu' to the coo when I'm done wi it!"'-Youth's Companion.

Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold or damp weather. It starts in the masal passages, affecting eyes, cars and throat. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus, and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow; severe pain in the head, a roaring sound in the ears, bad breath, and oftentimes an oftensive discharge. The remedy should be quick to allay inflammation and heal the membrane.
